

In The Spotlight
Defense AT&L
March-April 2005 issue

---

Geospatial intelligence—the visual representation of security-related activities worldwide—plays a critical role in our nation's defense at home and overseas.

The director of the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency, retired Air Force Lt. Gen. James R. Clapper Jr., explains how his agency is stepping up to the many challenges.

Also in this issue—among others:

- Requirements Management: A Template for Success
- Revitalization of Systems Engineering in DoD
- Weblog Technology for Acquisition Program Management
- Acquiring All You Need to Maintain Your Software
- Using Military Standards in Acquisition Programs